Passenger Trains End 109 Years of Service

An era ended Tuesday forenoon when the last scheduled passenger train ran from Portland to Island Pond. The first train over this line arrived in Bethel March 8, 1851, and since July 4 of that year scheduled service has been maintained. For many years there were two passenger trains each way including Sunday, and three each way week days. It is expected that summer passenger service will be resumed next year.

According to old-time records the section of the route that went through here should be credited to two men of this area. Best known was John Alfred Poor, a native of Andover who practiced law 10 years in Bangor. For years thereafter he devoted his time to the promotion of railroads. In his plans the path of the Portland-Montreal railroad lay through Andover to Colebrook, N. H., and Canaan, Vt. Convinced of the impossibility of building over the steep grades of Dixville Notch or that vicinity Timothy Hutchinson sought a more southerly route and two years before construction started surveyed much of the present location. Hutchinson, a native of Sangerville, was then living in Gorham, N. H. He achieved some fame as an inventor, and was builder of the "crooked mill" at Berlin and the well-known Lead Mine suspension bridge at Shelburne.

Completion of the railroad to the border ended the stage coach era here. Passengers and mail soon used the "steam cars." Freight which had been hauled to the "North Country" of New Hampshire and products of that area which had for some years been hauled to Harrison and down the lakes and canal to Portland, all used the new route. Towns of Bethel, Gorham, Berlin, North Stratford, and Island Pond grew amazingly. In Gorham the Grand Trunk shops serviced the 50 locomotives used this side of the Canadian line in the 1860's and for many years after.

Fuel for the locomotives was wood, cut and piled beside the tracks in many cases, and wood was supplied at many of the water stations and probably other places.

Train schedules of 1858 are shown on page 4 of this issue through the courtesy of Phillips C. Brooks, Bethel agent.
